This Week in Math:

6th Grade Math students engaged in a 3Act Model. The three acts include watching a video to identify a main question, seeking information to try to solve the main question, and finding the answer to the main question. The students worked in partners to come up with questions and predictions. The students did a great job using information from the video to come up with well, thought-out educated guesses. Great job 6th grade, keep working hard!

Homeroom students took the time this week to discuss respect in honor of Respect Week. The students discussed how they could respect other people by being kind, identified ways to respect themselves by using their values to make their own decisions, and watched videos on how being kind can "color" the world. The students also showed respect to one another. Great job 6th grade homeroom, way to show respect to others, yourself, and the environment!
